

Department of Criminalistic Sciences

The Department of Criminalistic Sciences implements study programs in the area of criminalistic science. As a trichotomic science, criminalistics covers contents which belong to criminalistic technique, criminalistic tactics, as well as various criminalistic methodics for different types of criminality.

The syllabi within this Department include latest scientific achievements within criminalistic science which students acquire, with the aim to learn the criminalistic methods for detecting and proving crimes in different areas. Prospective criminalists educated at the Faculty of Security acquire adequate knowledge, skills and abilities for tackling contemporary and other forms of criminal activities in the Republic of Macedonia and abroad. Hence, after graduation, they are competent to work in the sphere of security within security services and organs in the country.

The Department is composed of the following staff members: professor Boris Murgoski, PhD, professor Zlate Dimovski, PhD, associate professor Marina Malis Sazdovska, PhD, associate professor Svetlana Nikoloska, PhD (head of Department), associate professor Marjan Nikolovski, PhD, associate professor Dragana Batic, PhD, assistant professor Ljupco Nikolovski, PhD, and assistant professor Ice Ilijevski (secretary of Department).

The following is a list of former heads of the Department: associate professor Goce Dzukleski, PhD, assistant professor Marjan Koteski, PhD, associate professor Marjan Nikolovski, PhD and associate professor Marina Malis Sazdovska, PhD.

The teaching staff from this Department cover the areas of criminalistics, security, psychology, sociology, political sciences and other areas which are related to security and criminalistic issues.

The Department of Criminalistic Sciences is composed of distinguished professors in both science and practice. Namely, most Department members possess both practical and working experience in the Ministry of Interior and other state institutions, which facilitates the establishment of the link between theory with practice in the area of criminalistics and the application of criminalistic methodics with the aim to tackle some forms of crime in the Republic of Macedonia.

The Department staff participate in numerous international conferences, seminars and trainings. They also participate in the teaching process in other related institutions in Macedonia and abroad, they publish textbooks, supplementary materials, monographies etc., participate in various scientific and research projects etc.